

GRAND ONSTAGE
PLAYBILL

THIS IS THE
STORY OF THE
CHILD RULED
BY FEAR

David has written a play for himself and a gathering of friends and strangers to read together out loud. It tells the story of the rise and fall of an imaginary civilization in an imaginary land. It's okay if you feel nervous. David is nervous too. With so much to be fearful of these days, it's best to brave this thing together. An ingenious exercise in interactive storytelling, This Is the Story of the Child Ruled by Fear is a poetic and participatory fable about how to live with the slowly unfolding emergencies of our time.

Participate according to your own comfort – read for a character, join the chorus, or sit back and watch – and join this humorous, cathartic exploration of our innermost private fears.

“The divide between artist and audience becomes increasingly blurred, dynamizing the stage into a communal space for co-creation. If [this performance] proves anything, it's that new theatrical places will continue to be explored as artists and audiences navigate the potentialities of the return to being together.”

“Such a brilliant idea. The piece is intimate and deeply personal. It’s also driven by big, deep questions about human purpose and the much larger, mythic forces at work in all of our lives.”

"I left the theatre, and a discussable and pleasurable evening, with a renewed appreciation that theatre, the art form of real people together in the same room sharing an experience, is on the right track. We've always known it: it's validating to have a demo from an artist, a true original, that it's meaningful, even cathartic, to tell stories together about what haunts us, scares us, weighs us down. There's wonder in it. And wonder is enlivening."

This is the Story of the Child Ruled by Fear was the first live performance I had the honour of seeing after the COVID-19 pandemic shuttered our performance venues. It met the audience at a particular moment in time, and I can't imagine a more perfect show to embrace an audience in this situation - it was heartfelt, hilarious, and heart-wrenching. I wasn't the only one in the audience oscillating between giggles and tears.

"We all have fears and sometimes we can be brave and sometimes we can't. The play evades a simple answer. Nevertheless, the true outcome is that in the end, we have all partaken in a collective journey to create something that we don't know how it goes, and we journey together with generosity for the risk of participating. The result is a kind of vulnerable rough beauty."

— Dr. Jenn Stephenson, PLAY: The Blog

STRANGE VICTORY PERFORMANCE

is a collaboration between writer/performer David Gagnon Walker and multimedia designer Tori Morrison. They started producing together in 2020, focusing on experimental, interdisciplinary, and interactive text-based experiences. While grounded in text-based theatre practices, Strange Victory projects have included artists and techniques from dance, circus, visual art, poetry, and digital performance. Each project is very different, but they share a basic philosophy: colliding highly personal content with new creative methods and performance forms. SVP's primary interest is the mystery of creativity itself: the movement from an impulse, to an image, to a structured artistic work, and how this movement can teach, heal, and transform the human beings it passes through.
